The New York Times

Last Chance

Roy Dowell: "New Work"; closes on Saturday. In ways both subtle and bold, Mr. Dowell continues to glory in the capaciousness of collage without losing his head. The surfaces he assembles from his vast collection of found paper and cardboard are now more forcefully enriched by hand-drawn and painted additions. Palette, composition and stylistic evocation are dazzlingly fluid, as are the time periods evoked by different surfaces and left-over print. Modernism, advertising, scrapbook-keeping, the American scene and much more pass before the eye, subsumed within a flexible yet single-minded vision. (Smith)
